How Many Splits?

Apparently Mr. Hearst doesn't care much for harmony in his party. There are a lot of things that look better to Mr. Hearst than harmony. One of them is the supremacy of the program of political and economic radicalism of which he is the accepted evangel. Another is the has long been fighting; men and in- House. It is up to him now. fluences, sooth to say, in fighting which Mr. Hearst has acquired his largest hold on the following that now gathers round his banner.

Mr. Hearst is decidedly an independent. His reply to the Bryan acclaim is a challenge to Byran to choose between the support of Hearst and the support of those powers that Hearst rejects. Back of the challenge is the strongly sug- ilar legislation should have been engested alternative of another Hearst independent movement. Democratic harmony goes glimmering when Hearst and Bryan fall out.

Are the Republicans better off? They have more organization and discipline and the powerful cement of patronage actually in hand. But organizations are crumbling, discipline is weak, patronage makes less appeal than ever before. If the line of cleavage is not so plainly marked, yet the possibilities of division are just as apparent in the Republican as in the Democratic party.

Between Fairbanks and La Follette, between Cummins and Cannon, the gulf is wider than between Bryan and Hearst. There is, after all, much in common between the Democratic leaders; they are going in the same general direction. The Republican leaders are not; they are pulling squarely apart. If the Presienough grip to hold control?

In short, there are premonitions tradition is yet too strong in the could hold his fighting followers in port to the upper house.

Choking on Pure Food.

The Indianapolis News, with an independence that is praiseworthy and unusual considering the subjectmatter, has been dealing some telling blows in the interest of pure food legislation. In the first place, through the foresight of its Washington correspondent, the paper directed attention to a vicious amendment which had been accepted by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House. This amendment was drawn by the age is not yet quite clear. patent medicine interests. If added to the bill, it would legalize the sale of dangerous drugs and of alcohol which could be used in patent medicines without a word on the label as to their presence.

Members of the committee do not defend this amendment. Indeed, they will tell you that it is indefensible; that fifteen of the eighteen members are opposed to it, and that the amendment was adopted only because the committee got tired of the hammering of the patent medicine interests. Surely that is an indefensible reason-and one the Indianapolis News did well to lay bare, in common with a very few newspapers, including The Times.

The News also placed the responsibility for the inexcusable delay in enacting the measure into law where that responsibility belongs. Over three months ago the pure food bill passed the Senate with just four bill by the minority leader was susnegative votes. Twice, in the last tained. four years, a similar measure has passed the House, and the present membership is strongly in favor of the legislation. Why has the bill not passed? Logically, because the leaders have not wanted to pass it.

icy of postponement, if postponement be the policy, Speaker Cannon Rules. The Indianapolis News not only reached this conclusion, but accepted the defeat of the bill by this means as an accomplished fact and made the Speaker responsible.

Then the people at home began to notice. Suddenly he became one of the outspoken pure food advocates, and friendly members of the House spread abroad the Speaker's revised views on the subject of pure food. Furthermore, some of the Indiana Representatives went to the Vice President, who was credited with the ownership of the Indianapolis News. and urged Mr. Fairbanks to head off the attacks. The Vice President said that he did not own the paper, although a relative controlled it, and that he would employ his good offices in behalf of his friend, the Speaker.

All of which would have been obviated if the Speaker had reported mer. a rule providing for the passage of the bill without emasculating elimination from political influence amendments. The bill has been in of certain men and forces that he his hands ever since it reached the ### Protection Needed Now.

One of the best measures now pending before Congress with relation to the District of Columbia is that which provides for supervision of local employment agencies and is known as the Taylor bill. It should become law this session. Some simacted long ago.

Now that the measure has passed the House it is to be hoped the Senate Committee on the District will see that it is approved by the other body and without amendment. It is modeled closely on the Massachusetts and New York laws-which have been proven practical and adequate-includes the best provisions of both, and meets a need which will be manifest on the least examination of local conditions.

That it should have passed the House at this late day is due chiefly to the fine work done in its behalf by Representative Taylor of Ohio. He has followed its progress-too much of its career has been a lack of progress-with a disinterested purpose to see reasonable safeguards thrown about those anstitutions which serves effectually to refute the assertion frequently made dent slacks his rein over the team, in Washington that Congressmen who else is to take it with strong have no actual interest in District affairs.

Through the American Flag Association the public is earnestly requested to observe the day by flying the American colors from windows and house tops, by wearing little American flags and in doing everything possible to bring the American standard into conspicuous notice.

On June 14, 1777, Congress enacted what the flag of the thirteen United States should be, and April 4, 1818, further enacted that on the admission of a new State into the Union one star be added to the flag. There are now forty-five stars.
